P R E F A C E .

I THOUGHT at the onset that I would try and see how far back my wife's ancestors could be traced. Upon finding the MS. of the late Philip Capron, Esq., of Cumberland, R. I., I was enabled to trace them to the first Capron in America. I then thought I would endeavor to get all the descendants of Banfield Capron.

Persons generally who have compiled Genealogies, have traced only those of the surname of the original. I argued that a man's daughters are as much related to him as his sons; hence, the issue of daughters are as much the descendants of the text, as those of sons. Hundreds of family records are herein found with names different from the text.

That I have been able to obtain names of all the descendants of said Banfield Capron, and that these pages contain no errors of fact or date, it would be presumptuous to assert; but as this little volume contains thousands of names, and has been the result of thirteen months' labor and research, which can only be rightly understood by persons who have got out similar works, the writer, at the request of many of the within named persons, has concluded to have the same published for their perusal.

The author thinks the name of Capron is French, not English, as is supposed by some. There is no coat of arms for Capron, in any works of English Heraldry that he can find; I have never known or heard of an Englishman by the name of Capron.

The name of Capron (I am informed,) is found on old grave stones, near Erie, Pennsylvania; and tradition says, persons of that name came with the French when the latter built Fort Du Quesne. There are none of the name now living, or known, in that region ; those who survived, if any there were, probably left with the French when the fort was given up.

There is in the French language the word "capron," which means "hautboy, a strawberry of the largest sort," a very beautiful representation of which may be seen in the U. S. Patent Office Report, Agriculture for 1856.

The writer, while under obligations to many persons named in the following pages, for assistance in his work, is particularly indebted to Deacon William C. Capron, of Uxbridge, Mass. ; Adams White, Esq., of Brooklyn, Conn. ; Hiram Capron, Esq., of Paris, Canada West ; to Judge Elisha S. Capron, of New York City, and to Hon. Joseph Willard Capron, of Attleboro', Mass.

INTRODUCTION.

A short historical account of BANFIELD CAPRON, who came from Old England and settled in New England; of his descendants; and of the original families of the Scotts and Jenkses, with whom the Caprons became connected by marriage, and by blood akin. Written by PHILIP CAPRON in the year 1817, and in the 73d year of his age.

IN my younger years I had but little inclination to inquire after my ancient relations any further than the circle of my acquaintance with them; but of late years my mind has been much engaged to inquire after them, and I have taken considerable pains to know from whence they came, where they settled, of their connection by marriage, &c. Having now collected all the information about them that I ever expect to get, I have thought proper to commit the same to writing, for the benefit of those who may hereafter desire to obtain such information.

I would further mention, that I have obtained a great part of my information about our first ancestor and his family, from a number of his grandchildren, who lived near-and were well acquainted with them; and from a number of other old people who were, also, well acquainted with them; and I believe their information is as correct as it is possible to get it.

I was about seven years old when our first parent died; but do not remember of ever seeing him. Many things that have occurred since his death are within my knowledge. The information I have obtained from the Scotts and Jenkses is from family records, history, and from a number of old people, which will be found in the following pages.

Let it be remembered, that Banfield Capron was the only Capron, that we have any account of, that came from Old England and settled in New England. From him, we believe, descended all the Caprons that have been, or now (1817) are, in the United States of America. He came from England in a singular manner. He, with three other youths, each about 14 years old, and all schoolmates, mutually agreed to leave their native land, their relations, and friends, and everything that was near and dear to them, and go over to New England, (or, Columbus' New World, as it was then frequently called.) They knew of a vessel that was going to New England ; and the night before it sailed, they privately concealed themselves in the hold of the vessel, with a small matter of provision to live on a few days. The vessel sailed the next morning. After they had been to sea a few days, there was a strange noise heard from the hold. The hatchway was opened, and those four lads came upon deck, to the surprise of all the ship's crew. The captain said he must return with them, for it was against the law for any captain of a vessel to transport any of the inhabitants of England to America, except they got license to go there. But both of the mates, and all the ship's crew, thought it best to proceed on, and not return back ; and the captain finally fell in with their opinion, and brought them all safe to New England. It may at first appear very strange that those four youths should leave their native land, and their relations &c., and come over to New England ; but when we take into consideration the troubles and calamities the people of England experienced during the time they lived there and for many years before ; such as the persecutions for religious tenets ; the civil wars ; beheading their king ; the subversion of the government ; the plague which swept off nearly 70,000 of the inhabitants in a short time ; the great fire, which in four days burnt over 436 acres of the city of London, consuming 13,200 dwelling houses, 89 churches, and all the other public and private buildings thereon ; almost a continued war with the Dutch from the time of their birth till their departure ; the rebellions in Scotland, &c. &c. ; when these things are taken into consideration it will not appear so very strange.

And perhaps there were hundreds, if not thousands, of others that would gladly have availed themselves of a like opportunity.

History informs us that Oliver Cromwell and others were shipped on board of a vessel to come to America, but were prevented because they could not obtain licenses.

The name of the town or county that the said Banfield came from is forgotten ; but it has been kept in remembrance, that he came from the northerly part of England, and that the town joined Wales. By examining the map of England, I find that the county of Flint is the most northerly county in Wales, bordering on the sea ; that the county of Cheshire joins it ; that the river Dee runs between them and empties into the sea near the town of Chester, which is the largest town in the county of Cheshire, and the only seaport town that joins Wales in the northerly part of England. From these circumstances it is reasonable to conclude, that the town of Chester was the native place of the said Banfield.

I have not obtained any information where the said Banfield lived for several years after he came to New England, or what his business was ; but, soon after he came over, a family by the name of Callender, with whom he was acquainted in England, came over and settled in Rehoboth, who are said to have been a very respectable family, and in affluent circumstances.

The said Banfield became acquainted with them again, and afterwards married one of Callender's daughters, and settled in the town of Barrington, joining Rehoboth, where he lived about twenty years, according to best information I can get. In the year 1779, my business led me into Barrington, and I was at the house where the said Banfield first settled. The old gentleman that lived there, whose name was Humphrey, after finding out my name, told me that he bought his farm of one Banfield Capron, who had a large family of children, sons and daughters, and sold in order to move back into the woods, (Attleborough,) as it was then called, where he could get a greater quantity of land. He accordingly purchased again in the town of Attleborough, where he lived till his death, which was August 20, 1752, being about ninety years old. Some think he was considerably older. In the course of my inquiries, I found the Bible that was the said Banfield's. It is a large volume, and is now owned by Abiel Brown, Esq., one of the grandchildren of Banfield, who is now more than ninety years old. I was in hopes of finding some records therein, to inform me of many things; but there is nothing recorded in it now about the Caprons, only the time of the birth of Banfield's oldest daughter, which was his second child, and the mother of the said Brown. She was born October 22, 1684. Brown informed me that there were other records formerly on the blank leaves at the beginning or end of the Bible, but had become loose and were lost. Now supposing Banfield's first child was born in the year 1682 or '83, and that Banfield was twenty-one years old when it was born, it would make him to be ninety years old, or more, when he died. The said Banfield was of a middling stature, well-built, of a light complexion, blue eyes, and reddish hair. He held out to be a very smart, active, and capable man in his old age, to do business. He had twelve children, — six sons and six daughters, — as I am informed by his grandchildren. The name of one of the daughters is not remembered; it is supposed that she died young, while they lived in Barrington. I am not able to name the rest in rotation as they were born, therefore I shall name the sons first, and then the daughters, which were as follows, to wit: Banfield, Joseph, Edward, Walter, John, Jonathan, Betsey, Mary, Hannah, Margaret, Sarah. These children all lived to marry and have families.

I would observe, before I give any further account of his children, that I am informed by Esquire Brown, that his grandfather Capron lived with his first wife fifty-two years after they were married. She is supposed to have been about seventy years old when she died. He was well acquainted with the Callender family, who were frequently at his grandfather's and father's houses visiting. He informed me that one of the daughters married in Boston, by the name of Winter, or Winthrop; that two of their sons' names were John and Philip; that they sold their interest in Rehoboth a long time since, and moved into the State of New Hampshire, near Dartmouth College. This is all the information I have obtained about the Callenders.

The said Banfield married a second wife, by the name of Blackington, but I have had no particular account of her.

I shall now give such information as I have obtained concerning the said Banfield Capron's children and their families, leaving the oldest (who was my grandfather) for the last.

JOSEPH CAPRON was a farmer, and settled in Attleborough. He had two wives, by whom he had six children; viz.: Joseph, Hezekiah, Elijah, Amey, Judith, and Rhoda. He lived to be an old man, but his age I cannot ascertain.

EDWARD CAPRON was a shoemaker by trade. He settled in West Greenwich, had two wives and a number of children. He lived to be an old man.

WALTER CAPRON was a forgerman, and settled in Groton, near New London, Conn. The information I have obtained about him and his family is by a letter from Giles Capron, one of his sons, which is as follows:—

“Walter Capron, deceased, lived to the age of eighty-four years. He died possessed of a good farm in Groton. Had two wives; by the first he had seven children, — three sons and four daughters. Their names were Samuel, Elkanah, William, Elizabeth, Alice, Sylvia, and Sibbel. They all lived to be old people, and were all married, except Elkanah, who died young. Samuel was lost at sea; he left a wife and one child.

“The children by his second wife were named Jared, Giles, Simeon, and Hope. The oldest is dead, the rest are living in the town of Preston. My sister is seventy years old, and in good circumstances. My age is sixty-six, and I am possessed of a good farm. Simeon is an infirm man, and in low circumstances.

“The grandchildren of the said Walter are numerous, — how many I cannot tell. The number of my grandchildren is forty-four.

“Dated April 23^d, 1814.”

JOHN CAPRON was a seafaring man. He married, and his family lived in the south of Cumberland, on the farm now owned by Russell Jenks. He died of a fever at home, when he was a young man, and left a widow and three children. Their names were John, Banfield, and Keziah.

JONATHAN CAPRON was a farmer, and lived with his father, in Attleboro'. He married, and had eight children, viz.: Benjamin, Jonathan, Elisha, Comfort, Elizabeth, Margaret, Hannah, and Rebecca. He lived to be an old man.

BETSEY CAPRON, the oldest daughter, married Captain John Brown, and lived in Cumberland, by whom she had seven children, viz.: John, Joseph, Philip, Abiel, Betsey, Eleanor, and Margaret. She lived to an old age.

MARY CAPRON, married Capt. Samuel Tyler, of Attleboro', by whom she had seven children, — four sons and three daughters, viz.: Moses, Nathan, Ebenezer, Samuel, Mary, Huldah, and Elizabeth.

HANNAH CAPRON married David Aldrich, of Mendon, by whom she had seven children: Edward, David, Peter, Jonathan, Abner, Levi, and Margaret. She lived to be an old woman, but her age I cannot ascertain.

MARGARET CAPRON married William Arnold, Esq., of Smithfield, by whom she had three children, Benedict, Gideon, and Susannah. I have understood that she died soon after she had her last child, and was but a young woman when she died.

SARAH CAPRON married Ralph Freeman, of Attleboro'. They afterwards lived in Bellingham, and from there moved to Richmond, New Hampshire, where they lived till their death. She was a very old woman when she died, and had ten children, viz.: Ebenezer, Benjamin, Nathan, Ralph, Samuel, Dan, Jemima, Sarah (who died young), Esther, and Sarah.

I have given a short account of ten branches of the first family of Caprons, and have given the names of all the children, except Edward Capron's. They make sixty-two grandchildren, — thirty-seven males and twenty-five females, — which are of the third generation. Of the grandchildren, five or six died without issue, viz.: Benedict Arnold was not far from twenty years old when he died. Sarah Freeman was about eighteen. John Capron was about twenty-five. Samuel Tyler and Elkanah Capron died young, but at what age I cannot tell; and I do not know whether Hezekiah Capron married or not; but the others all married and had families of children, which were very numerous, and it is out of my power to enumerate them or to give any further particular account concerning them; therefore, I shall only observe, that, of these sixty-two grandchildren, nearly all lived to be men and women grown, and they generally lived to be old persons. More than forty of them lived to be over seventy years old, and several to be ninety or more.

Abiel Brown is now (1817) living, and is more than ninety years old. He is a smart, active man, retains his memory very well, and is capable of doing considerable labor. I went to see him, last fall, and in our conversation I asked him if he did any work. He said, "I work every day." About two years before, I was at his house, and he was making a set of wagon wheels; and the work was neatly executed. He is a very ingenious man, and has followed the mill and wheelwright business for more than sixty years.

I would further observe, that there is now of the seventh generation of the Caprons; that the fourth and fifth have become very numerous, and have spread into divers parts of North America. They have settled in the States of Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, and Canada; and how many other places I cannot tell.

I shall now proceed to give an account of the first Capron born in New England, who was my grandfather. I have left him for the last, as I have before mentioned, in order to give a more particular account of him and his descendants than I have done concerning the other branches of the first family, because it is within my knowledge to do it.

BANFIELD CAPRON, 2d, was born in the year 1682-3, and died August 16, 1752, being about seventy years old. Some time before his death, a violent cancer broke out on his upper lip, which ate off a part of his face, and was the cause of his death. Before that time he was a capable man, and did an abundance of hard labor for a man of his age. He was of large stature, well built, very stout, bold, resolute, and persevering in all his business; of a light complexion, blue eyes, and reddish hair. He was a mason by trade, did much work at building chimneys in the neighboring towns and in Providence, and was considered in his days to be one of the best of workmen. He was a weaver, also, and did considerable at that when he was not employed in other business. In those days men did the greatest part of the weaving. He married Hannah Jencks, daughter of Nathaniel Jencks, of Pawtucket, and granddaughter of Joseph Jencks, who was the first settler in that place. They had twelve children, — six sons and six daughters, whose names were Nathaniel, Charles, Philip, Benjamin, Jonathan, and Oliver, Hannah, Betsey, Leah, Lydia, Sarah, and Elizabeth.

I have been informed by a number of old people, who were near neighbors to my grandfather and his family, that they were very smart, active and handsome, while living, but a great part of them, like the flowers of a garden, young, lovely, beautiful and gay in the morning, and before noon, wither, droop and die.

NATHANIEL CAPRON, when about twenty years old, went to sea, and has not been heard of since. About four years after, as I have been informed, which would be in the year 1738, the lung fever got into the family, and they were all sick with it, excepting my grandfather and Leah, and Oliver, who was about two years old ; he was taken from the family during the sickness, and taken care of by one of his aunts. In a short time, not more than two or three months after, six of the children, with their mother, were dead, viz. : Philip, Benjamin, Jonathan, Betsey, and Lydia. The fever was very violent, and seemed to sweep everything before it. I have been informed by a number of old people, who were neighbors and gave their assistance during the sickness, that the distresses of the family were very great indeed, and that my grandfather's fatigue and troubles were so great that he could scarcely retain his senses at times. At one time when the doctor came to see them, two of the family lay dead in the house, and he told the doctor that he "did not know but he would kill all his family." The physician was so grieved at being implicated as the means of their death, that he wept like a child. It was thought, however, that he used every means in his power to save their lives, according to his best skill and judgment. His name was Thayer, and he was called a very skillful physician. The method of treating fevers in those days was very different from what it is now. My father, at the time of this sickness, was living with my grandfather Scott, in Bellingham; yet he was with his father's family considerable, and by that means caught the fever, and was sick at his father Scott's. He was so sick that his life was despaired of. He craved, very much, cold water, but the physician would not allow him to drink any thing cold. At the time he was sickest, Peter Cook, a young man about his age, one of his associates, came to watch with him; and after the family had retired to bed, my father begged very hard for cold water, so hard that Cook went to the well, and got some for him. Cook, thinking that he would not live until morning, and that some cold water would do him no hurt, gave him some, and found to his surprise that it relieved him. He gave him some a second time, which also had good effect. Being encouraged from this, he continued from time to time to give him water during the night. In the morning he was in a moderate sweat, and the fever had turned.

This story I have heard my father and Cook tell a great many times. They both considered that the water was the means of saving his life. Cook, the last time I saw him, when he was about ninety years old, said he once saved my father's life by giving him cold water.

My grandfather married for his second wife, Sarah Brown, the widow of Benjamin Brown. She again became a widow, and lived several years after his death.

I shall now proceed to give an account of those which survived.

LEAH CAPRON married Joseph Scott, of Bellingham, (my mother's brother.) She had one child named Leah, and died soon after, being between twenty and thirty years old.

SARAH CAPRON married David Scott, of Bellingham, (one of my mother's cousins,) by whom she had nine children:—

Nathaniel, David, Sylvanus, Ichabod, Welcome, Mary, Sarah, Joanna, and Leah. She lost her husband when she was about sixty years old, and has remained a widow since. She is now (1817) living, being about eighty-five years old. She is a large woman, with a good constitution, and has been a very capable woman for business all her life.

ELIZABETH CAPRON married Elkanah Spear, of Cumberland, by whom she had three children : — Lydia, Cynthia, and Elkanah. He husband went as an officer in the French wars in Canada, and there died of the small pox. She married, for her second husband, Seth Hall, of Bellingham, by whom she had five sons : — George, William, Asa, Lemuel, and Benjamin. She again became a widow, and remained so through the remainder of her life. She died in June, 1798, aged sixty-four or sixty-five years. She was a likely, prudent, saving and industrious woman.

OLIVER CAPRON was the youngest of the family. He was born in July, 1736, and died July 31, or August 1, 1816, being a few days over eighty years old. His father gave him, by his will, all his real estate, being a small farm in the north part of Cumberland. He married his cousin, Esther Freeman, daughter of Ralph Freeman. They lived in Cumberland a few years, and then moved to Richmond, New Hampshire. They had seven children : — Nathan, Otis, Oliver, Thaddeus, Alpheus, Hannah, and Elizabeth. Before he was married he went one or two campaigns in the French War near Crown Point. In the Revolutionary War he commanded a company of soldiers one campaign, near Boston. He was afterwards promoted to a colonel's commission, and commanded a regiment of militia. He was also a Justice of the Peace and a Representative to their General Court, from Richmond, during several years. He was a man of good natural abilities, with a taste for public business ; and being naturally generous and obliging, he was made use of in other people's business a great part of his time, which caused him to neglect his own too much, and, never having but a small interest, he got embarrassed. His oldest son lived in Canada, near Montreal, who persuaded his father to sell his estate in Richmond and to move there, which he did. Soon after they moved to Canada they had the small pox, which was fatal to his wife. He afterwards married a second wife, who died within one year after they were married. Meeting with much trouble and disappointment, some loss of property, things not proving to his expectation, and his interest being nearly exhausted, he concluded to move back into New Hampshire. He came to Swanzy, and lived with his son-in-law Wright for several years; then came to Cumberland, and tarried about two years with his relations and old acquaintances. During this time his son-in-law died, when he returned back and lived with his daughter till his death, in 1816. He was a stout, spry, and an active man, well built, rather more than middling stature, light complexion and reddish hair.

I shall now give an account of my father and his family. My grandfather was the first Capron born in New England, and my father was his oldest son that had issue; and as I propose that this narrative should follow the oldest male branches, from generation to generation, I have left my father for the last, and shall endeavor to give a particular account of him and his family. (See remark on a preceding page.) The way I reckon the oldest male line is as follows, viz: — Banfield Capron, who came from England, I will call the first generation; his son Banfield I call the second; Charles, the son of Banfield 2d, the third; Philip, the son of Charles, the fourth; Silas, the son of Philip, the fifth; Burrill, the son of Silas, the sixth; and Philip, the son of Burrill, the seventh.

CHARLES CAPRON was born in October, 1716, and died May 9, 1789, in the seventy-third year of his age. He married Mary Scott, daughter of Joseph Scott, of Bellingham. Her mother's maiden name was Jenks, and she was cousin to my grandmother Capron. They had eleven children, — five sons and six daughters. Their names, with the time of their respective births and deaths, the names of their respective husbands or wives, with the time of their respective deaths, &c., &c., may be found on the twenty-seventh page of this book.

It may be observed that this large family, consisting of eleven children, all lived till the youngest was more than fifty years old, and their average age at that time was more than sixty years, — which is very remarkable for so large a family. There is but one instance within my knowledge that exceeds it; and that is the family of Moses Aldrich, of Mendon, the Quaker preacher. His family consisted of twelve children. When the first died the youngest was more than sixty years old, and they lived to between seventy and eighty, and from eighty to ninety years. The mother was nearly a hundred years old when she died.

From what has been written in the foregoing pages, it may be observed that my father's family were very near akin to the Scott and Jencks families. For this reason, before I make mention of them individually, I shall give a short account of the original families of Scott and Jencks, until the time that the connection between the two families took place.

RICHARD SCOTT and two brothers came from England to Boston. One settled in Boston, one in Newport, and Richard joined Roger Williams' company at Providence. He was admitted by them an equal tenant in common in all the lands which Roger Williams had purchased of two Narraganset sachems, Canannicus and Miantonomi, which consisted of the county of Providence and a large part of the county of Kent. From several circumstances it is presumed that he was young when he came to Providence. It appears that he made choice of land near Whipple's Bridge, in Smithfield, for his settlement.

It is now (1817) owned by Jeremiah Scott. He lived there till King Philip's War, and was then killed by an Indian.

He had built him a house for defence, thick studded, filled between with brick and mortar. He used to stay in his house nights, while others went into the fort at Pawtucket for security against the Indians. One morning he went to his door, and while he was looking to see if he could see any enemy near the house, an Indian, from an ambush, shot an arrow into his bowels, which caused his death. All the information I can obtain concerning his family is, that he had one son only that outlived him, whose name was Sylvanus, and who was the only heir and possessor of all his father's property. In the course of my inquiry I found the Bible which is supposed to have been Richard Scott's originally. It is in two large quarto volumes, and appears to be very ancient. It is now owned by my aunt, A. Wilkinson, who is a granddaughter of the said Sylvanus Scott. In this Bible I found a record of the said Sylvanus's children, which is as follows :—

John Scott ; born September 30, 1694.

Catharine ; born March 31, 1696.

Joseph ; born August 15, 1697.

Rebecca ; born February 11, 1699.

Esther ; born December 5, 1700.

Sylvanus ; born June 20, 1702.

Joanna ; born December 11, 1703.

Charles ; born August 23, 1705.

Sarah ; born June 15, 1707.

Jeremiah ; born March 11, 1709.

Nathaniel ; born April 19, 1711.

From this large family there has descended a very numerous offspring. I shall give an account where the males settled and when the females married.

JOHN SCOTT settled on the plain, near what is called the great meadow hollow, where the road from Pawtucket joins the great county road. He owned great possessions on the plain and meadow.

JOSEPH SCOTT, (who was my grandfather,) and SYLVANUS SCOTT, both settled in Bellingham on excellent land. They owned also large tracts of land in other parts. Samuel and Saul Scott, grandchildren to Joseph, own a part of their grandfather's first settlement.

CHARLES SCOTT settled in Cumberland, on a very valuable tract of land, a part of which is now owned by his grandson Nathaniel Scott.

JEREMIAH SCOTT died without issue. He gave his estate to his brother Nathaniel. They being the youngest sons, their father had given them by his Will "all his real estate," being the original settlement of the said Richard Scott.

NATHANIEL had but one heir, whose name is Jeremiah, and he now (1817) owns and lives on the same. It is a rare thing to find one of the first settlements in the State continue by heirship in the original name to this day. Some years ago Col. Nightingale told me that there was but one single lot in the town of Providence, (which contains six acres,) but had been transferred from the original owner's name; and that lot was owned by the descendants of Roger Williams, and has descended to the present owner by heirship.

CATHARINE SCOTT married Nathaniel Jenks, second son of Gov. Joseph Jenks, of Pawtucket.

REBECCA SCOTT married John Wilkinson, of Smithfield, from whom have descended a large number of very respectable people, among them are the Wilkinsons at Pawtucket, &c.

ESTHER SCOTT married Thomas Sayles, Esq., of Smithfield, who was a very respectable and capable man, and from him has descended a family of superior abilities.

JOANNA SCOTT married Judge Daniel Jenks, son of Elder Ebenezer Jenks. They first settled in Smithfield, but soon moved to Providence, where they resided till their deaths. He accumulated a very great interest, principally by trading at sea, being very fortunate. It was said that at one time he traded as much at sea as all the other people in Providence. History says he was a member of the Baptist Church in Providence forty-eight years; a member of the General Assembly forty years, and Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas about thirty years. He had only one son, who was a man of superior abilities.

SARAH SCOTT, the youngest daughter, married Gov. Stephen Hopkins, of Providence. His character and abilities are well known, being a noble statesman.

JOSEPH SCOTT, (my grandfather,) married Elizabeth Jenks, of Lynn, Mass., by whom he had seven children: — Mary, (my mother,) Elizabeth, John, Samuel, Joseph, George and Abigail. John and his father died within a few hours of each other, of a fever. The father was aged about forty years. His widow lived till she was about seventy years old.

I shall now give a brief account of the original families of Jenks.

JOSEPH JENKS was born in Buckinghamshire, England, in 1632. He and a brother, when young, came to Lynn, Mass. His brother concluded to settle at Lynn, but Joseph went in a short time to Pawtucket, R. I., where he built a house, which was the first house built by a white man at that place; which house, it is said, remains to this day (1817), and is now owned by the widow and heirs of the late Ichabod Jenks. He afterwards built him a forge to make bar iron, which was burnt in King Philip's War by the Indians. It was soon rebuilt, and vast quantities of iron were made in it for more than a hundred years. History says the Jenks family mostly resided in Pawtucket and its vicinity for nearly a hundred years ; and they all descended from the Hon. Joseph Jenks, Esq. He had four children, all sons, who are reputed to have been very eminent men. Their names were Joseph, Nathaniel, Ebenezer, and William.

JOSEPH JENKS filled many important offices in the State, (or Colony, as it was then called,) and was an ambassador to the Court of St. James for several years, on business of the Colony. He was afterwards appointed Governor of the Colony. He held this office for five years, and was solicited to remain longer in the chair of state, but declined on account of age.

Major NATHANIEL JENKS was a very respectable man, of good abilities, and had a large family. His daughter Hannah was my grandfather's wife.

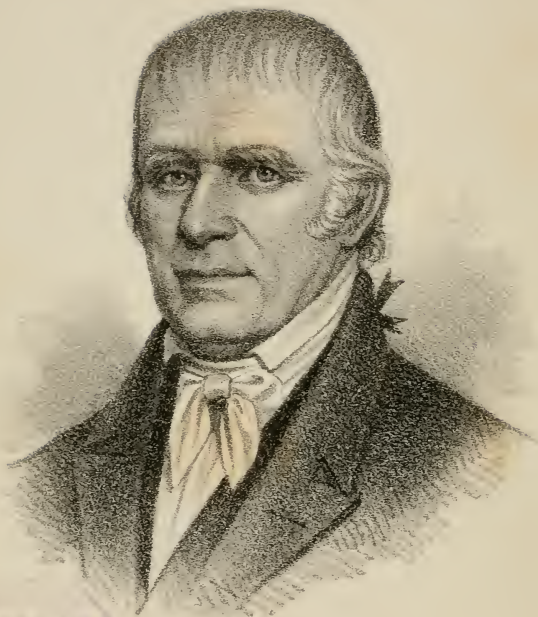

EBENEZER JENKS was ordained Pastor of the Baptist Church in Providence, and continued to administer to that church till his death. He refused serving in any civil office, except the surveyorship of the proprietary of Providence.

WILLIAM JENKS was a Judge of the Court in Providence for a considerable time. From him has descended a large family of very respectable men, according to the account given in the history of the Jenkses.

I have now given a short account of the original families of the Scotts and Jenkses, till the connection of the families with the Caprons took place. I would further observe, that there was a corresponding connection in friendship and business between the families of Jeremiah Scott, Governor Jenks and brothers, and Banfield Capron, as well before as after their connection in marriage. They all lived within a few miles of each other, and were in those days like near neighbors in these days.

At the forge in Pawtucket, commonly called the Jenks forge, Joseph and Sylvanus Scott, and their brother-in-law

David Jenks, Walter Capron, and his brother-in-law David Aldrich, all learned the art of making iron. Afterwards, Daniel Jenks, Joseph and Sylvanus Scott, purchased a privilege of John Arnold at Woonsocket Falls, and built a forge, where they manufactured iron for several years. They then sold it to the late Judge Thomas Arnold, Judge Caleb Aldrich, and Robert Aldrich, Esq.

Capt. LEVI ALDRICH, son of David and Hannah, married Abigail Hunt, February 7, 1745.

The following facts concerning Capt. Aldrich were communicated to me by his grandson, Paine Aldrich, Esq., of Worcester, Mass.

"Capt. Levi Aldrich was sixteen years old, the very day his son, Major Rufus Aldrich, was born. He was a blacksmith, and had a trip-hammer, a very remarkable thing in those days; and he kept a public house in Mendon, Mass., near the Bellingham line. Public vendues, sales of cattle, &c., &c., were held at his house. He was a very large man, but having a small hand and foot, although the calf of his leg was enormously large. Near his tavern a brook crossed the road. The auctions at his inn were usually well attended by the neighbors, especially by a number of men named Streeter, quite diminutive in size, who were generally present. One day, but two of them having arrived, some one said, 'Capt. Aldrich, where are the Streeters?' 'You wont see them here to-day,' said the Captain. 'I set one of my boots by the brook out here, the other day, and caught seven of them in it in one night.'"

I am informed by my antiquarian friend, P. S. Thayer, Esq., of Millville, Mass., that "when Capt. Levi Aldrich died, A.D. 1796, he weighed over three hundred pounds. He was so very large they were obliged to take the casings off the doors to get the coffin out of his house. Ten of his children attended his funeral, and after he was buried they were weighed, and the aggregate of all their weights was over twenty-one hundred pounds."

Mr. Samuel Cook, now (1859) living in (this town), Blackstone, Mass., was present at the above funeral, and "remembers the circumstance distinctly of taking off the door casings."
